Tessa at Mariwyl Labradors is in labor, and about to deliver our first Whelp Watch litter of 2009:

<http://mariwyl.com/nursery.html>

(scroll down approx 1/2 way down the page to see the camera. You may have to push "play", by clicking on the arrow.

Good luck to Mariwyl Labradors!

Some of the things I have noticed with this camera. Sometimes it says "not broadcasting" after awhile of watching. Just reload the page, and restart the stream.

:-) Remember, if things are not going well, or if the owner decides they need privacy at any point during a whelping, cameras may be turned off. If this happens, we'll do our best to get an update on the litter when the timing is appropriate, so folks won't worry.

Got her up and watching, love the sound feature.

Lost the broadcast. Either they turned it off, or maxed out on bandwidth.

Wondered why everyone was so quiet here. It's because everyone is chatting on the live stream page:

Enjoy!

That push resulted in another boy (3boys, 2 girls), but the little man is getting his first meal, and will make his photo debut later.

Boy, I sure didn't expect to spend my New Year watching someone else have puppies, but it was fun watching our first litter of the year. Looks like all nine are doing well, and since Mary Ann is cleaning the box, she must be done. 5 girls/4 boys all black (as expected).

Long day! Night all !

Mary Ann reports that there was a 10th puppy. He was stillborn, late in the night. Tessa's nine bouncing babies are doing very well today!

I haven't been able to get the cam up all day.
Is there a problem or did Di turn it off?

Re:Tessa at Mariwyl - First litter of 2009

I have no way to "turn off" someone's camera. If we have a link to their camera showing, and if the camera is not on, then they've got it off. I'm sure the owner hasn't had it on. I know that the webcam software is in her husband's computer, and she told me he took it to work. :-)

I spoke with Mary Ann today. She has decided not to have her camera on for now. She did have her second litter, but found that the chat feature that the stream host made available added a bit more stress than she had wanted. Everyone is doing great!
